

Depression

Two in three people experience depression, low mood, or anxiety at some point in their life. It can be mild and last only a few weeks or it can be a lot more severe.

Types of Depression

There are several different types of depression

- Simple depression - is a general feeling of despair and sadness.
 - Manic depression - is when your mood fluctuates between intense depression and mania (or elevated mood). This is also known as bipolar disorder.
 - Seasonal Affective Disorder (SAD) - is a specific type of depression that affects people in the autumn and winter months. It is believed that SAD is related to a lack of daylight exposure and people begin to suffer as the days get shorter.
 - Postnatal depression - is a fairly common problem that occurs in women after childbirth. It usually begins in the weeks following the birth, but can take months to develop.

Symptoms of Depression

Depression is a common problem in older adults. And the symptoms of elderly depression can affect every aspect of your life, impacting your energy, appetite, sleep, and interest in work, hobbies, and relationships.

The following symptoms can range from being mild to severe.

- Feelings of sadness
- Poor motivation
- Poor concentration
- Sleeping problems (either sleeping too much or too little)

- Changes in appetite (either eating too much or too little), which may result in weight loss or weight gain
- General aches and pains
- Having less energy than is usual for you
- Constantly thinking 'life is not worth living'
- Feelings of uselessness/worthlessness
- Feelings of irritability

People can become depressed for any number of reasons, or for no obvious reason, however some common triggers can include:

- genetic factors
- bereavement
- work, relationship or financial problems
- unemployment and retirement
- or changes in body chemistry as a result of illness
- anxiety

Anyone at any time in their life can become depressed and some people are more susceptible than others.

The HelpGuide provides information on how you can recognise depression in older people and how you can help your loved ones if you think they are depressed.

Patient Information Centre has a range of easy to read mental health self help guides. These also contain questions to consider, strategies to help you recover and books that may help.

Prevention

It is not always possible to prevent depression. However, it is important for you to improve your emotional wellbeing. This can be done by:

- Getting enough rest (aim to have eight hours sleep every night)
- Taking yoga/massage classes

- Keeping physically active
 - Healthy eating and drinking
 - Sharing your feelings and talking over problems with family members or friends that you trust

Treatment

People suffering from a mild form of depression may benefit from treatments such as talking therapy, cognitive behaviour therapy (CBT), specific counselling, an exercise programme, or a self-help programme.

People suffering from moderate to severe depression may be treated with anti-depressant medicines, psychological treatments, or counselling.

In the first instance, it is important to speak to your GP who will be able to discuss your feelings with you, offer support and treatment, or refer you for counselling or other specialist support.

Local Advice and Information

If you are suffering from depression you may feel alone or desperate at times. It is important to remember that there are many people who can provide advice and support. Your friends, family or GP may be the first people you turn to, however, if you would find this difficult or embarrassing there are many organisations that can help.

Arts Therapies Art therapy is a form of psychotherapy that supports individuals who are feeling sad, lonely or anxious. They could use art, dance, music as a form of creative expression and the form fits the needs of the person.

Launchpad is an organisation run by and for people experiencing mental health problems. They are involved in the planning, delivery, monitoring and evaluation of Mental Health services, advocating to influence the decisions made around Mental Health services.

ReCoCo: The Recovery College run various peer-led support groups, and free educational and creative courses, which are open to anyone who would find them helpful in their recovery from mental illness, substance misuse, trauma or anxiety.

Chain Reaction service supports older people to live independently in the community by combating social isolation and increasing good emotional health and wellbeing.

They can offer:

- advice, advocacy and liaison to get support such as aids and adaptations and welfare rights
- help in gaining access to other services
- access to local community organisations and resources
- risk assessment to help people to stay safe
- developing peer and volunteer support networks
- emotional support

This service is available if you receive support from social services or aren't in a position to pay for care yourself.

If you're not eligible for this service but are affected by loneliness and isolation, support is available to help you to build new networks of support and develop friendships in your local community.

Ways to Wellness service helps people in the West of Newcastle to manage their long-term conditions, which may include activities such as:

- Getting involved in local groups and activities
- Accessing specialist services and support
- Healthy eating and getting more active
- Getting support around benefits and welfare rights
