

Before you go into hospital

When you have to go into hospital it can be a worrying and uncertain time. You may be attending for an appointment, or you may be staying overnight or for a much longer period of time. This section gives you information on what to do before you go into hospital, which will hopefully help to prepare you for your visit.

Speak to your GP

If you are about to go into hospital, you should try to let your GP know the date you are due to go in.

If you are caring for somebody else, talk with your GP about how correct care can be continued while you are in hospital.

If you think that you may need help to carry out your normal activities after leaving hospital, you should discuss it with your GP before you go in as well as with the hospital staff during your stay.

Hospitals in Newcastle

Newcastle upon Tyne Hospitals NHS Foundation Trust runs the two main hospitals in Newcastle; the Royal Victoria Infirmary (RVI) and the Freeman Hospital. The Trust also runs the Campus for Ageing and Vitality on the site of the former General Hospital.

The Patient and Visitor Information section on the Trust's website has more information on your stay in hospital.

Individual or Special Needs

Newcastle upon Tyne Hospitals NHS Foundation Trust provide the following services and facilities:

- Interpreter Service (including sign language and lip speakers) – if you require an interpreter, you need to contact the hospital ward before you go into hospital.
- Wheelchairs or other special equipment – you can take any special equipment you already have into hospital with you that you may need. However, you should contact the nurse in charge of the relevant area before you go in, so that the hospital staff know what you are bringing in with you.
- Guide dogs – are permitted in hospital
- Carers – you should advise the nursing staff on the ward if you are a carer or have a carer,

so that they can take your needs into account

- Mobility – if you need assistance getting to the ward or to the department you are visiting in the hospital, you should ask the receptionist who will arrange help for you.

Accessible Information Standard

If you have a sensory loss or disability you are entitled by law to accessible information about your health care and support from the NHS and publicly funded social care services. For example this could include large print or a professional BSL interpreter at medical appointments.

Services must:

- Find out your information needs
- Record them in a set way
- Highlight them in your records so that staff meet your needs every time you use services
- Share your information needs with other services e.g. if you give details to your GP then these can be shared with any hospital service you maybe referred to
- Make sure you get support the way you need including when your needs vary. For example you may need to receive short letters in large print but need longer documents on audio.
- Ask on a regular basis if your needs have changed

Remember – tell services this is your right to have your needs addressed and they have to do this by law (section 250 of the Health and Social Care Act 2012)

What should I take with me?

Unless you are an emergency patient, you will have received an admission notification letter telling you when you need to go into hospital and where you need to go. You should take this letter with you.

You should also take in the following:

Information

- National Insurance number
- Government Pension Book number
- Department of Social Security number
- Name of your GP

Personal Items

- Night clothes, including a dressing gown and slippers. You may wish to bring some comfortable and loose ordinary clothing for during the day. Bedside storage space is limited so you should try to keep the amount to a minimum.

- Toiletries, such as toothbrush, toothpaste, soap, shampoo, flannel, hairbrush/comb, shaving equipment (facilities are generally available on hospital wards for electric razors; however you should take your own shaving adaptor)
- Towels
- A small amount of money, in case you want to buy anything from the shop or use a payphone
- Books, magazines, puzzles, music, or notepaper and a pen, so that you have things to keep your mind occupied
- Any special equipment that you require to meet your specific needs, e.g. a wheelchair or walking stick

If you are able to, it is helpful to mark all clothing and towels with your name.

You should avoid taking valuables into hospital. Hospital staff can't accept responsibility for the loss of personal property or valuables, unless you have handed them over for safe keeping to the nursing staff. If you do hand them over to staff, you should ask for a receipt.

Medication

You should take any medication that you are currently taking into hospital and tell the nursing and medical staff what you are taking. If you have your medication in an organiser, such as a Dossette or Medidos box, or have any special cards which detail current treatment, you should let the staff know.

It is also important that you let the nursing and medical staff know if you have any allergies (e.g. to certain drugs or to latex), or if you have had any adverse reactions to medication, so that they can make a note of it in your records.

If any of your medication is changed while you are in hospital, the hospital will supply what you need.

What if I have a pet that needs looking after?

You may have family or friends that can look after your pet whilst you are in hospital. However, if you don't have anyone that can help, there are many local pet sitting and pet caring companies to choose from.

The Cinnamon Trust is a national charity for older people and their pets. Amongst other things they provide a national fostering service for pets whose owners face a spell in hospital. A network of volunteers take pets into their own homes and care for them until you leave hospital and are ready to be reunited.
