

Trusts

What is a trust?

A trust is a legal arrangement where you give your money, property or investments to someone else (a trustee) so they can look after your assets for the benefit of a third person (the beneficiary). For example, you could put some of your savings or property in a trust for your children or grandchildren.

Trusts are complex legal arrangements. If you decide to set up a trust you will need a trustee to look after the trust for you.

It can be expensive to set up a trust and so independent advice is essential to make sure that a trust is the right option for you.

Can a trust help me avoid paying for care?

Not necessarily. Some companies may offer to protect your property by setting up a trust for you. This is usually an expensive legal agreement. Many local authorities still take any property or money that you have given away into consideration when working out how much you will pay towards your care fees, even if it's no longer in your possession. For more information please visit Paying for Care Deprivation of assets.

Your care fees will be means tested. All of your assets (property, money and investments) will be taken into account. If you have assets of more than £23,250 you will need to pay towards your care until your resources run out. You can find more information on Information Now on Paying For Care and Your Care: Financial assessments.

You may be at risk if you need to pay for your care and have given away your property or money. This could also lead to difficult conversations with the beneficiaries of your trust.

Can a trust help me to avoid paying inheritance tax?

When you put money or property in a trust, you no longer own it and it may not count towards your Inheritance Tax bill.
