

Learning disability local support services

What is a learning disability?

A learning disability is a reduced intellectual ability which results in difficulty with everyday activities through life. People with a learning disability tend to take longer to learn and may need support to develop new skills, understand complicated information and interact with other people. The level of support someone needs depends on the individual. It's important to remember that with the right support, most people with a learning disability in the UK can lead independent lives.

A learning disability is a life-long condition. It affects a person's ability to communicate or to do everyday things.

What is a learning difficulty?

Many people with a learning disability prefer to use the term 'learning difficulty'. In health and social care services, the phrases 'learning difficulty' and 'learning disability' are not always used to mean the same thing. In UK education services a person with a learning difficulty may be described as having specific problems processing certain types of information. Unlike a learning disability, a learning difficulty does not affect general intelligence or IQ.

Causes of learning disabilities

A learning disability is caused by the way the brain develops before, during or soon after birth.

Conditions associated with learning disability are:

- Down's syndrome
- Williams syndrome
- Autism
- Fragile X syndrome
- Cerebral Palsy

For detailed information visit the Mencap page.

Adult Social Care

People who are struggling with day to day activities such as moving around your home, cooking, eating, washing, or caring for someone can get help from Adult Social Care.

Adult Social CarePoint at Newcastle City Council can talk to you and give you information or advice. They can put you in touch with local services and help to arrange:

- an assessment to find out what support is available to you (needs assessment)

Adult Learning Disability and Autism Team is part of Newcastle Adult Social Care. They help adults with a learning disability and their carers. You need to speak to Community Health and Social Care Direct and have a needs assessment to get help from this team. If you have eligible care and support needs they can then:

- talk to you about your needs
- plan your care and support with you
- make sure that your support is working for you
- work with other professionals who have been asked to support you
- help to protect you from abuse (this is known as safeguarding)
- work with Childrens, Education and Health Services to help young people with learning disabilities and/or autism, move to Adult Social Care services
- promote the rights of people with learning disabilities and/or autism

Moving from Children's to Adult Social Care

Children's Social Care supports families with children and young people under the age of 18. They work with families to make sure that children and young people are safe, healthy, and have the support they need to grow up happy and well. When you reach the age of 18, Social Care services are usually provided by Adult Social Care.

You will start the move to Adult Social Care between the age of 16 and 18. This is known as the transition from Children's to Adult Services. There is not a set age to move to Adults Social Care. Everybody is different. It will happen at the time that is right for you. To help plan your move to Adult Social Care you will be offered a Transition Assessment, also known as a Needs Assessment.
