

Feeling lonely?

What is Loneliness?

We all feel lonely at some point in our lives. It is perfectly normal to feel lonely, as it is a sign that as humans, we often enjoy the company of others. Loneliness can be felt momentarily or it may be felt for much longer. People who feel lonely often do not acknowledge these emotions or tell others and so it becomes hidden. Feeling lonely can lead to more serious health problems such as depression. It has been found the loneliness can impact upon a person's health as much as smoking 15 cigarettes per day.

An event such as moving into a new home or the death of a loved one may increase feelings of loneliness. If you are feeling lonely or you're worried about someone you care for who may be feeling lonely support is available. It can be useful to think of positive ways to overcome any feelings of loneliness that you may be experiencing.

Loneliness and health

Prolonged isolation and feelings of loneliness have been found to have negative effects on health. You may find other articles within the Health section on InformationNOW which may be useful.

Speak to your GP who can refer you to link workers through social prescribing.

NHS Care Volunteer Responder service is a free telephone service for people who are vulnerable, isolated or lonely. Volunteers will call you to check in and chat. The service is free and you don't need to be referred by a doctor. You can have one off or regular phone calls from a volunteer. They will have a chat and listen to you. They can help you explore changes you can make in your life. For example to connect with others, become more physically active, to learn new skills or volunteer. They can signpost you to other services and support in the community.
