

Domestic abuse

Domestic abuse can happen to anyone. All genders can be abused or abusers. In most cases it is experienced by women and done by men. It's described as any incident or pattern of incidents that are: controlling, coercive, threatening, violent. It is called domestic abuse because it affects those in a relationship, the whole family or all those living together in a home. It affects those who witness the abuse and the wider family and friends who are aware of the abuse. Children are recognised in their own right as victims. Domestic abuse can happen:

- inside and outside the home
- over the phone, on the internet and on social networking sites
- in any relationship and can continue even after the relationship has ended
- to any gender. Anyone can be abused or abusers.

UK government definition of domestic abuse “Any incident or pattern of incidents of controlling, coercive or threatening behaviour, violence or abuse between those aged 16 or over who are or have been intimate partners or family members regardless of gender or sexuality”

What to do if you're experiencing domestic abuse

In an emergency situation, or someone's life is in danger call 999

To report abuse please:

- complete an online form
- contact Adult Social Care at Newcastle City Council
- contact someone you trust, such as a GP, nurse, police officer or care worker.
They will pass on your concerns to the safeguarding agencies

If you're worried someone might see you have visited a domestic violence help page, the Women's Aid website tells you how to cover your tracks online.

Types of domestic abuse

Domestic abuse (also known as domestic violence) can be emotional, physical, sexual, financial or psychological. It is revealed through patterns of behaviour such as:

- kicking, hitting, punching or cutting
- sex or a sexual act without your consent, rape, unwanted sexual demands
- controlling someone's finances by withholding money or stopping someone earning
- controlling behaviour, like telling someone where they can go and what they can wear
- not letting someone leave the house
- reading your emails, text messages or letters
- threatening to kill someone or harm them
- forced or predatory marriage
- threatening another family member or pet
- belittling you
- making unreasonable demands for attention
- destroying things that belong to you or family members
- stalking

Signs of domestic abuse

It can be difficult to tell if domestic abuse is happening. Abusers can act very differently when other people are around. There are signs that family members, children and young people have experienced or witnessed domestic abuse which include:

- aggression or bullying
- anti-social behaviour, like vandalism
- anxiety, depression or suicidal thoughts
- drug or alcohol use
- eating disorders
- withdrawing from friends, family and social events

Read more about how to recognise domestic abuse from Women's Aid

Signs of domestic abuse in children

Children may start to behave differently if they witness abuse in their home. They may start to show signs of:

- attention seeking behaviour
- bed-wetting, nightmares or insomnia
- constant or regular sickness, like colds, headaches and mouth ulcers
- problems in school or trouble learning
- tantrums

Effects of domestic abuse

Living in a home where domestic abuse happens can have a serious impact on your mental and physical wellbeing, as well as behaviour. With children and young people this can last into adulthood.

What's important is to make sure the abuse stops and the family and particularly children and young people have a safe and stable environment to grow up in.

How to contact the Police if speaking or making a noise would put you in danger

The Silent Solution police system

If you're in an emergency situation and need police help, but can't speak, Make Yourself Heard to let the 999 operator know your call is genuine. All 999 calls are directed to call centres where you are asked which service you need. If no service is requested but something suspicious is heard during your call, BT operators will connect you to a police call handler if you can communicate with them using the steps described below:

1. Listen to the call handlers questions
2. Cough or tap the handset if possible
3. Press 55 if prompted, to let them know your call is genuine. You can then be put through to the police
4. If calling from a landline the silent solution can't be used. They will try to ask you questions and get a response from you. If they can't decide if your call is genuine, the call may be ended. However the call may stay connected for 45 seconds. Pick up the handset again to let the police know your call is genuine. If the call handler is worried about your safety you'll be connected to your local police. Calling from a landline gives the call handler more information about your location.
