Digital Poverty Alliance

The Digital Poverty Alliance is a campaigning organisation. They believe that digital inequality needs to be included in policy and discussion about social mobility and levelling up the UK. They are a member-based organisation, building collective action, learning and sharing with UK-based and international organisations.

They:

- create and host community spaces where cross sector partners, champions, and people with a diversity of views and experience can come together to learn from one another, share what works and tools, remove duplication, and co-create solutions where there are gaps

- enable a collective voice to drive collective action to integrate insight, evaluations, and recommendations to enable simpler user journeys for partners and policy makers to drive the change required and create a cohesive National Digital Poverty Delivery Plan.

They are looking for volunteer Ambassadors and organisations to connect with.
