

Hearing the Voice, Durham University

Hearing the Voice is a large interdisciplinary study that looks at the issue of hearing voices and how it affects people. The study is in its second phase and is based at Durham University, funded by the Wellcome Trust.

The aim of the study is to transform the way in which voice-hearing is managed, treated and understood through a comprehensive online resource for voice-hearers and mental health professionals, as well as an ambitious arts-led programme of public engagement.

They also have information on their website about finding support and local support groups.

Last updated: August 27, 2020

Telephone: 0191 334 8163

Website: <http://hearingthevoice.org/>

Twitter: <https://twitter.com/hearingvoice>

Facebook: <https://www.facebook.com/hearingthevoicedurham>

Address:

Caedmon Building
School of Education
Leazes Road
Durham University
DH1 1SZ

Related Articles

Hearing voices and hallucinations